

“What you leave behind
is not what is engraved
in stone monuments,
but what is woven into
the lives of others.”

- Pericles

The Expedition Project's aims are ambitious. Its scope is vast. But its vision is grounded in years of hands-on experience and professional attention to detail. Roger Wynne-Dyke's firsthand experience of working with underprivileged communities has done away with any illusions he may have started out with. And yet, he has emerged more hopeful for the future of this country. Where obstacles stand in the way of meaningful change, he sees opportunities for creativity and growth. Where resources are scant, he sees potential to use what is at hand. His mission, and the mission of this entire project, is to empower and inspire people to create a better future by using the only time we have: now.

The Expedition Project's success depends on the assistance of strong corporate partners. We are looking to collaborate with organisations that share our vision and passion for meaningful change. Our aim is to redefine corporate social investment and to harness our unique African pioneering spirit and resourcefulness. As a nation, South Africa showed the world that peaceful transition to democracy was possible. Now we have the opportunity to show the world that it is possible to change the future. In the words of first century AD philosopher Pliny the elder:

“Ex Africa semper aliquid novi.”

[Always something new out of Africa]
